Virulent Newcastle Disease in Chickens, Downtown Los Angeles, Los Angeles County

On 05/18/18 at 1105 hours, the California State Warning Center (CSWC) received report from the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) that CDFA detected virulent Newcastle disease in 10 chickens in Downtown Los Angeles, Los Angeles County.

- The detection has been confirmed by the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).
- This is the first case of virulent Newcastle disease, previously referred to as exotic Newcastle disease, in the U.S. since 2003.
- There is no commercial poultry production and no farms in the immediate vicinity.
- Virulent Newcastle disease is not a food safety concern.
- No human cases of Newcastle disease have ever occurred from eating poultry products.
- Infection is easily prevented by using standard personal protective equipment.
- CDFA is working with federal and local partners as well as poultry owners to respond to the finding.
- State officials have quarantined potentially exposed birds and are testing for the disease.
- Cal OES is monitoring and remains on standby to assist as warranted.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

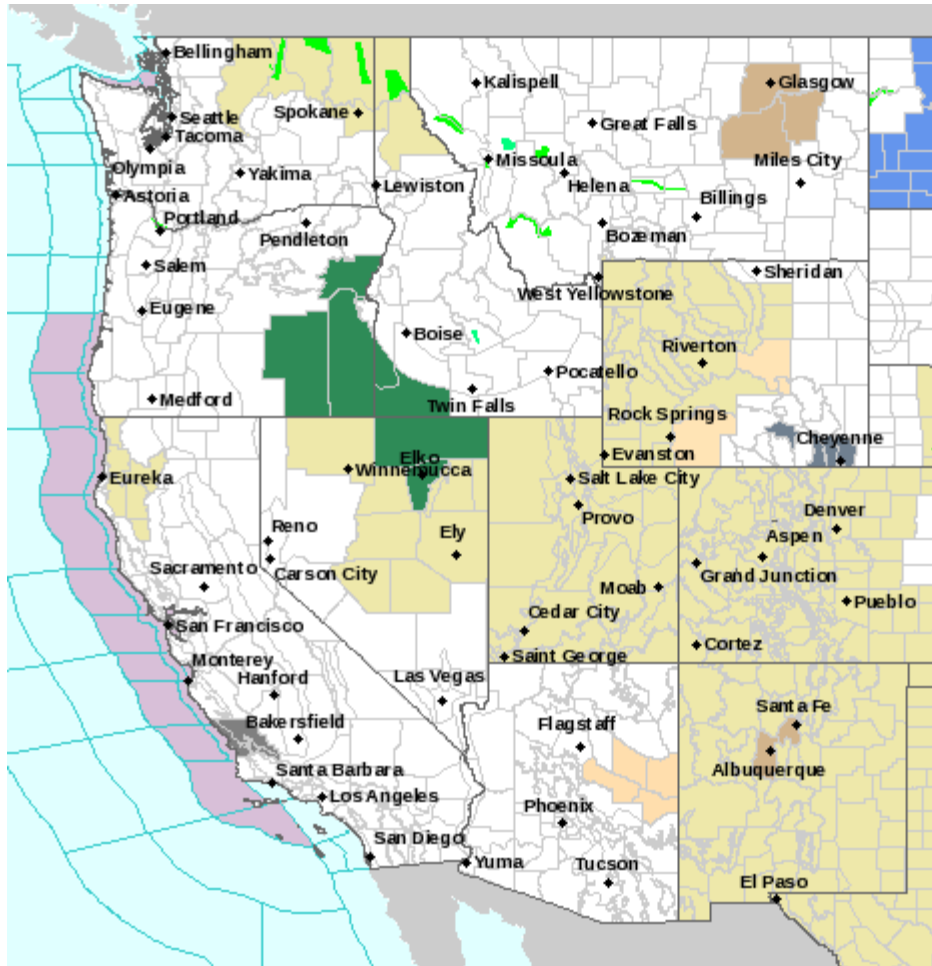

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Temperatures over interior Northern California will remain warm this weekend, with the possibility of mountain showers and thunderstorms. Another low pressure area will settle over California and western Nevada, bringing an increased chance for storms through the remainder of the weekend and into the middle of next week. Some of these storms will produce locally heavy rainfall, especially Monday and Tuesday. Daily afternoon showers and thunderstorms will be possible over the interior mountains through the middle of the upcoming work week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A trough along the West Coast and a coastal eddy will continue seasonally cool weather through Sunday with extensive night and morning low clouds along and west of the mountains. Sunny skies will continue over the mountains and deserts with gusty west winds at times. On Monday and Tuesday a deeper low pressure system will bring additional cooling and a chance for afternoon showers and thunderstorms over the northern mountains and high deserts. It will be dry and slightly warmer Wednesday through Friday.
